

June 9th, 2010 – High Schools across BC will soon be getting some life-saving money. Yesterday, the BC government announced a new program to get students trained in CPR, but in Prince George, the program has already been in place for several years. Daybreak spoke to Brian Pepper, he is the Superintendent of the Prince George School District.

Click the play button to listen!

