

June 8th, 2010 – High School students will be getting a new program. The BC Government announced today that all secondary school students from around the province will receive CPR training. Money contributed by a trio of pharmaceutical companies, AstraZeneca Canada, Pfizer Canada and sanofi-aventis, will purchase thousands of CPR mannequins. As Jason Proctor reports, it's a move being applauded by the Education Minister.

Click the play button to listen!

